SOME FOUNDERS OF CAMPBELL'S STATION, TENNESSEE: A GENEALOGY OF ALEXANDER, DAVID, AND JAMES CAMPBELL

Compiled by Laura E. Luttrell

Alexander, David, and James Campbell, brothers, were among that great number of liberty-loving men who had as their objective the establishment of an independent government for themselves and their descendants. They aided in gaining the independence of America and, with their wives, struggled to found institutions—homes, schools, churches—that would assure perpetuation of a free country. This history of three frontiersmen and their courageous wives is typical of the lives of many of the early inhabitants of East Tennessee.

Their origin as far back as is known begins with (1) Alexander Campbell, of Inverary, Argyllshire, Scotland. His son, (2) William Campbell, married Mary Byers and removed to the north of Ireland, near Londonderry, Ulster District. After seven of their eight children were born, they sailed to America and, finally, settled in Augusta County, Virginia.¹ Distant relatives, John Campbell and members of his family, already had established a home in that county.

The children of (2) William and Mary (Byers) Campbell were: (3) David, father of Captain David Campbell, founder of Campbell's Station; Elizabeth; Martha, wife of William Ellison; Alexander, who lived in Kentucky; Robert; Jane; William, father of Major William Campbell, of Nashville, Tennessee; and Mary, wife of Major John Steele.²

(3) Robert Campbell (1718?-Apr. 1786), son of (2) William and Mary (Byers) Campbell, was born in Ireland and died in North Carolina. He served his new country during the colonial period as did other men of the same name. His three sons were: (4) Alexander, David, and James, who were born in Augusta County, Virginia. The family lived, also, for some time in Washington County, Virginia; then, about 1779, it removed to Washington County, North Carolina (later Tennessee). Robert died in the latter county in 1786. James Rodgers, who afterward settled in Knox County, Tennessee, was administrator of his estate.³

The three brothers, Alexander, David, and James, took part in the Battle of King's Mountain, October 7, 1780, in the regiment of Colonel John Sevier under the overall command of General William Campbell.⁴

When, in 1788, the county of Greene was erected from a part of Washington County, they became citizens of the new county. Captain David Campbell, their cousin, who also served in the Battle of King's Mountain, had removed with his family the year before and was at this time in Greene County.⁵

The State of Franklin began operations in 1784 and, on May 31, 1785, made the Dumplin Creek Treaty with the Cherokees. It was agreed by the Indians that "lands on the south side of Holston and French Broad Rivers to the waters of [Little] Tennessee may be . . . resided on." Following this treaty there was a rush of settlers down these rivers. Later the same year James White "pitched his tent four miles above the mouth of French Broad River on the north bank." The following year he moved farther down and established a fort on the north bank of the Holston (now Tennessee) River where Knoxville was founded October 3, 1791. This movement on the part of James White encouraged others to venture yet farther west on the Holston.

The next year, in March, 1787, Captain David Campbell, with Archibald McCaleb, Alexander and "Elder" David Campbell, and Jonathan Douglass—all from Greene County with their families—arrived fifteen miles below White's Fort and located about two miles north of the Holston (now Tennessee) River on Turkey Creek in the beautiful and fertile Grassy Valley.⁶ There was at that place a good spring of "swiftly flowing water." It was not a great distance from the Cherokee towns on the Little Tennessee River, then known as the Tennessee. Captain David Campbell had married Margaret Campbell, sister of Judge David Campbell. Alexander and "Elder" David Campbell had married nieces of Margaret Campbell—the Lockhart sisters.⁷

The wives and children were taken on horseback, their equipment (woodworking tools, agricultural implements, cooking and household utensils, seeds, etc.) on pack horses. With loaded rifles in hand, the men kept a sharp lookout for lurking enemies as many of the red men were opposed to the recent treaty. The horses traveled single file along the narrow trail and had to be guided lest they wander off on the side and displace their loads among the trees.

The men felled trees, built cabins, cleared some ground, and planted corn. Thus Campbell's Station was founded under the leadership of Captain (afterward Colonel) David Campbell.⁸ These rifle-bearing pioneers kept their guns near while working in the field, for unseen and unheard foes might rush upon them from the woods or canebrakes. One day only three of the men were at the place working in a field in sight of the cabins when two guns were fired at them from behind a small ridge. They did not go after the Indians but went to the houses to protect the women and children. The very next day all of their fourteen horses were taken away. A half-breed Indian friend, George Fields, and his stepfather, John Martin, came to the cabins to report that the horses thieves, about twenty in number, were seen when they were eight miles away.¹¹

It was then discovered that a number of Indians had hidden on the opposite side of the cabins from the corn field. When these occurrences became known, Captain John Beard, with a company of militiamen, came from the country above Campbell's Station to drive off any Indians found in that vicinity. In any event, it was planned to move the families to Amos Byrd's Station about six miles east on the Holston (Tennessee). Captain Beard and his men took the families to the river and they were taken by the Station men up the river in canoes to Byrd's.¹²

The five men would go back and forth to the Station to work their crops and they went on foot several times to the town of Chota in the Indian Nation in an attempt to get their horses back. They offered a reward if the Cherokees would make a search for the stolen horses but without success. The red men would say that the Creeks took the horses. Late in the autumn the families were moved back to their own station. The crops were gathered and some horses procured to work and to take their corn to mill. At this time they had only fifteen miles to travel to White's tub mill while, at first, they had to go fifteen miles above White's Fort. During the winter preparations for growing larger crops were made.¹³

In the early spring, it must have been, the inhabitants of the Station were joined by James Campbell and Robert Blackburn (father of the Reverend Gideon Blackburn) with their families and, also, by Joseph Taylor, who later married a daughter of Robert Blackburn.¹⁴ These settlers then had a good prospect of clearing more ground and of carrying on farming operations in a successful way when a report was brought, in May, 1788, that the family of John Kirk had been killed by a band of Indians led by Chiefs Slim Tom and Red Bird, of Chilhowie. The Kirk farm was about nine miles from the Cherokee town of Chota.¹⁵

Much excitement was aroused. A number of men from above White's Fort marched to Campbell's Station and insisted that the men there join them in an attack on an Indian town. Captain Campbell cautioned them that such action might bring on an open war. However, those men could not be persuaded to abandon revenge but were so determined that the Captain and some of the men accompanied them to the town of Coyatee. However, the Indian warriors had fled upon learning of the approach of the white men. Two or three Indians were killed, but the family of Susanna

Martin was not injured as she had been a longtime friend of the white people.¹⁸

As preparations for war against the Cherokees were being made, the people at Campbell's Station were ordered by the general of the brigade to join White's Fort. Thus the families were moved the second time.¹⁷ The Chickamaugas (Cherokees of the Lower Towns, along the Tennessee near Chattanooga) were stealing horses and committing other crimes, so Brigadier General Joseph Martin led an expedition against them. About five hundred militiamen, including the Campbell's Station men, assembled at White's Fort to join the campaign. There was a skirmish at the end of Lookout Mountain but, owing to the narrow and difficult trails with Indians stationed behind rocks and trees, the battle had to be given up.¹⁸

Upon the return of the men to White's Fort, preparations by Captain Campbell's men were made to make the journey to their Station. This time they took permanent possession. Soon the fort was made stronger. The families would move out to their plantations but, whenever danger of Indian uprisings was reported, they would seek safety by returning to the Station. It was nearly nine years before they could safely settle without constant fear of losing their scalps.¹⁹

ALEXANDER CAMPBELL AND SOME OF HIS DESCENDANTS

(4) Alexander Campbell (1761-Sept. 7, 1816), son of (3) Robert Campbell, was born in Augusta County, Virginia; died in Knox County, Tennessee. It already has been stated that he was a soldier at the Battle of King's Mountain. He served, also, at the Battle of Guilford Court House, 1781.²⁰ In 1782 he married Mary Lockhart (Mar. 12, 1766-Mar. 12, 1842), daughter of William and Mary (Campbell) Lockhart and granddaughter of "White" David Campbell and wife, Mary Hamilton. They had two children when they went to Campbell's Station in 1787. Alexander selected a site for his home on the north bank of the French Broad River; twice, upon being threatened by the enemy, he moved his family back to the Station and then changed his location on that river. About the time of the establishment of the Territory of the United States South of the River Ohio, with William Blount as governor, he was living in a cabin on the site of James White's stop over in 1785. There his twin sons became ill and died; they were buried on that place. Some of Alexander's descendants live there at present. Cherokees annoyed the parents by coming near the house imitating the cries of the two infants, and then shooting arrows into the logs, or chinking, of the cabin.²¹

Susannah Emory was the granddaughter of Ludovic Grant, a trader out of Charleston, S. C. She had been the wife of John Stuart; had a son, Bushyhead. Later she was the wife of Richard Fields and was the mother of George and Lucy Fields. John Martin was her third husband.

In 1793 the Indians became extremely active and vindictive—stealing horses, burning homes, and killing and scalping settlers in widely scattered parts of Blount, Knox, Sevier, and other counties. The house of Robert Blackburn, two or three miles from Campbell's Station, was burned and his plantation "laid waste."²² Thomas Gilliam (brother of Devereux Gilliam, who was settled at the confluence of the French Broad and Holston rivers) and his son, James, were killed and scalped by Indians about sixteen miles north of Knoxville. Two war clubs were left beside the bodies.²³ Isolated families sought refuge in the stations or forts. Alexander again took his family to Campbell's Station. After the intended attack by the Cherokees upon Knoxville failed and the Indians were defeated at Etowah, Georgia, Alexander made his permanent seat on the north side of French Broad River at what is now Riverdale Community. The settlers between the Holston and French Broad rivers were free from disastrous incursions by the red men, but the fear of Indian raids from the south of French Broad was ever present. Whenever her husband was away at night Mary Lockhart Campbell would take her children into the canebrake, or a hollow in the woods, to hide from Indians. If a child should cry she would move to another place. The nearest neighbor was more than a mile away.²⁴

During the years of the existence of the territorial government, Alexander Campbell was often a member of the jury and was called away from home at intervals to serve in the militia. After the state of Tennessee was admitted into the Union, Governor John Sevier commissioned him captain of a Knox County company of militia, October 10, 1796.²⁵ He and his wife were members of the Lebanon-in-the-Fork Presbyterian Church, organized by the Reverend Samuel Carrick in 1791.²⁶ A number of his descendants have been members of that church. He acquired a large plantation of fertile land, raised livestock, and erected a commodious house for his large family. His youngest child was born in 1806.

On September 7, 1816, he died at a comparatively early age. Three sons and seven daughters survived him. His widow died in 1842. As he left no will, his son, William, became administrator of his estate. An inventory of his movable estate shows what economic operations were in progress on a large plantation in that early time. Included in the long list of commodities are a secretary, books, one Negro man, and a bond on Stockley Donelson for eight hundred acres of land, dated June 18, 1792, with the notation, ". . . the estate of Donelson is insolvent and nothing can be had."²⁷ Alexander, his wife, his son, William, and family were buried on a part of his farm later owned by Benjamin McNutt. A grandson, T. R. C. Campbell, erected a monument at the graves.²⁸

The children of Captain Alexander Campbell and wife, Mary Lockhart, with exception of twin sons who died in infancy, were: (5) Margaret, William, Mary, Jane, Elizabeth, James, Ann, Cynthia, John, and Harriet.

MARGARET CAMPBELL DOWLER McCAMPBELL

(5) Margaret (Peggy) Campbell (b. 1783), daughter of Captain Alexander and Mary (Lockhart) Campbell, was about four years of age when she was taken to Campbell's Station by her parents. She grew up on the frontier where Indian alarms were dreaded. She was married, first, in 1806, to William Dowler, who died in 1814. They had three daughters. (6) Sarah Dowler (b. 1807) married, February 14, 1828, Samuel Pickle, of Asbury; and their only daughter, (7) Emeline, died when about grown. (6) Mary Campbell Dowler (b. 1809) married John Brannum. (6) Louisa Dowler married Harvey McBee.²⁹

(5) Margaret (Peggy) Dowler married, second, November 28, 1915, Solomon McCampbell, a widower who had eight children, some of whom removed to Texas. He was a Revolutionary soldier in Virginia; removed to the State of Franklin, 1787; lived in Blount County and was commissioned lieutenant of militia in 1800; removed to Knox County in Beaver Creek Valley; received a Revolutionary pension in Knox County; died in Alabama in 1845, survived by his third wife.³⁰ His son, by his second wife, Jack McCampbell, died young.

WILLIAM CAMPBELL

(5) William Campbell (Oct. 29, 1785-Feb. 15, 1828), eldest son of Captain Alexander and Mary (Lockhart) Campbell, was born in Greene County, North Carolina (later, Tennessee); died in Knox County, Tennessee. He was only a year and four months old when his parents took him and his sister to the Grassy Valley settlement and, some years later, to the north side of the French Broad River. There his mother frequently would hide him and the other children from Indian foes. William admired the captain's uniform that his father wore as captain of a company of mounted infantry. His father gave him a farm, probably after he married, July 20, 1815, Elizabeth (Betsy) Goddard (June 6, 1792-May 11, 1864), daughter of Hugh and Mary (Avis) Goddard. William was administrator of his father's estate in 1816. When William died his eight children were named in his will, dated January 2, 1828, and probated April 7, 1828. His plantation was willed to his three sons to be divided when his youngest son should become twenty-one years of age. The children were: (6) James Monroe, John, Mary (Polly), Jane, Margaret, Cynthia, Hugh G., and Harriet.³¹

(6) James Monroe Campbell, M.D. (Mar. 18, 1816-Jan. 21, 1877) was a physician; married, January 21, 1847, Margaret Joanna Gamble (Nov. 20, 1831-July 31, 1875). They had seven children, only three of whom lived to become adults: (7) Hugh Samuel, Luther Douglas, and Emma Adelia.

A number of East Tennessee men lost their lives in that disaster.

(7) Luther Douglas Campbell (Oct. 15, 1852-Sept. 12, 1927) was a dry goods merchant in Cleveland, Tennessee; also a director of the Cleveland National Bank. He married first, September 20, 1876, Maggie Lowry and they had a son, (8) James Luther Campbell (b. July 12, 1877), who was graduated from the University of Tennessee in 1903. In 1927 he was living in Georgia.²² The second wife of L. D. Campbell was Lavinia Henegar, sister of Edward Henegar, of Knoxville. She died January 24, 1845, at the age of eighty years.

(7) Emma Adelia Campbell (b. July 16, 1865) married November 14, 1895, Horace Tipton and lived at Cleveland, Tennessee. They had two sons: (8) Sharon Campbell Tipton (b. Oct. 15, 1896) and (8) Douglas Monroe Tipton (b. Dec. 20, 1901).

(6) John (Jack) Campbell (b. Nov. 7, 1817), second son of William and Betsy Campbell, married Martha Anderson. They had a son, (7) William, and a daughter, (7) Martha Jane, who lived in Missouri.

(6) Mary (Polly) Campbell (Mar. 19, 1819-May 15, 1841) married, August 24, 1837, Andrew Anderson Henderson (May 14, 1817-Sept. 1847) and lived at Dandridge, Tennessee. Their sons were: (7) John Henderson (1838-1841) and (7) William A. C. Henderson (May 15, 1841-Oct. 1863), who lived in Kentucky; was killed during the Civil War in Nashville, Tennessee.

(6) Jane Campbell (Nov. 13, 1820-Mar. 10, 1881) married, May 10, 1858, a widower, Samuel Hannibal Love (Jan. 20, 1808-Aug. 21, 1897). They lived on Rutledge Pike at Love's Creek; buried in Spring Place Cemetery, Knox County.²³

(6) Margaret Emeline Campbell (Apr. 18, 1822-Oct. 15, 1878) was not married.

(6) Cynthia Ann Campbell (Mar. 2, 1824-Nov. 7, 1883) married, November 23, 1843, John (Jack) D. Armstrong. They were married by John Campbell, justice of the peace. Their daughter, (7) Delia Armstrong, married Beecher Doak.

(6) Hugh Goddard Campbell (Feb. 4, 1826-Oct. 12, 1892) was the third son of William and Betsy (Goddard) Campbell. He was born and died in Knox County at Riverdale; was a prosperous farmer; married, November 6, 1856, Sophia Jane Doak (1832-Aug. 7, 1918) who was the great granddaughter of Archibald Alexander. His three children were: (7) Samuel Monroe, Margaret E., and Charles A. In H. G. Campbell's will, dated November 5, 1891, he bequeathed to his son, Samuel M., the farm in the seventh civil district of Knox County known as the "Home Place"; to his other son, Charles A., the farm in the twenty-second civil district that was

(7) Samuel Monroe Campbell (May 8, 1861-Feb. 7, 1915) lived on the "Home Place" left to him by his father, the same location where James White "pitched his tent" in 1785. He married, May 18, 1882, Annie Eliza Kennedy (1865-Aug. 16, 1947), daughter of James and Martha (Armstrong) Kennedy. Her father established the New Salem Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church (the so-called Seceder church) at Riverdale. However, after a few years there were not enough members to sustain it. Mrs. Annie K. Campbell, a devoted church member and student of the Bible, read the New Testament through thirteen times. Their two sons are: (8) Hugh Kennedy Campbell (b. Apr. 1, 1883), a bachelor, and (8) Lloyd Roscoe Campbell (b. Apr. 21, 1895) who married Estelle Pierce, daughter of Rennie and Dora (Jones) Pierce. They have four daughters: Mildred, Margaret, who married William P. Armstrong; Marie, who married Ernest Weileman; and Dorothy, who married James Spruiell.

(7) Charles Alexander Campbell (Jan. 22, 1867-Feb. 16, 1902) married Eulah Keener (d. Oct. 10, 1920).

(7) Margaret Campbell (Mar. 20, 1870-Oct. 9, 1891) married John Caldwell, of Strawberry Plains. After her death John Caldwell married Stella Snoddy.

(6) Harriet Campbell, youngest child of William and Betsy (Goddard) Campbell, was born December 15, 1827.

MARY CAMPBELL HUNTER

(5) Mary (Polly) Campbell (d. before 1850), daughter of Captain Alexander and Mary (Lockhart) Campbell, married April 29, 1806, John Hunter, of Virginia. They had three sons. (6) Campbell Hunter (b. 1811-d. after 1850) had a good education but engaged in a duel that affected his mind—so it is said. In 1850 he was living at the home of Thomas and Cynthia (Campbell) Rodgers a few miles from Knoxville.⁸² (6) Lockhart Hunter served in the Texas War for Independence in Colonel Bold's regiment in General Sam Houston's army, and was captured by the Mexicans, but managed to escape. He became a lawyer in Texas; married and had a family in western Texas. (6) Alexander Hunter, the third son of John and Mary C. Hunter, lived in Texas.

JANE CAMPBELL GODDARD

(5) Jane Campbell (d. Nov. 5, 1830), daughter of Captain Alexander and Mary (Lockhart) Campbell, was skillful in weaving, fine sewing, and embroidery, as were all her sisters. She married, July 29, 1815, William Goddard (1788-Sept. 1836), son of Hugh and Mary (Avis) Goddard, of Virginia. William was commissioned captain of a company of men in the Tenth Tennessee Regiment on March 2, 1814.⁸³ In that year he purchased a farm on the north side of French Broad River that adjoined the lands of Christian Pickle and Benjamin McNutt. As he still owed part of the purchase price of the land in 1815, he could not afford to buy a broad cloth suit for his wedding as he had planned. Therefore, he was married in a homespun suit and his bride did not wear the new silk dress she so skillfully had made but was dressed in keeping with the bridegroom's attire. After Jane's death in 1830, he took his six children to Alabama but afterward returned to Knox County, Tennessee, where he died in 1836. His brother-in-law, John Campbell, was administrator of the estate. The children were: (6) Harriet C., Elizabeth M., Mary Ann, Hugh A., Cynthia Jane, and John L. Goddard.

(6) Harriet C. Goddard (Nov. 22, 1817-May 3, 1851) was born in Knox County, Tennessee; died in Grimes County, Texas. She married, April 29, 1833, Henry H. Boggess. They removed to Benton County, Alabama, and from there, in 1840, to Grimes County, Texas. Harriet became a member of the Methodist church in 1849. Four of their children died before her death. Her husband and four sons who survived her were living at Anderson, Texas, in 1851.⁵⁷

(6) Elizabeth M. Goddard (b. Jan. 1, 1820) married Charles Welborn and had two children, (7) William and Charlie (daughter) Welborn, both of whom married and had, each, several children.

(6) Mary Ann Goddard (Dec. 21, 1821-July 7, 1882), lived, after the death of both parents, at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Betsy Meek, and her husband, Daniel Meek, about a mile east of Strawberry Plains, Jefferson County, Tennessee. She became a member of the Shunem, or Strawberry Plains Presbyterian Church that was founded by the Reverend Samuel Carrick the same year that Lebanon Presbyterian Church in Knox County was organized. Mary Ann was married, September 6, 1838, to Gaines McMillan (Mar. 14, 1815-Jan. 21, 1897), son of John and Jane (Meek) McMillan. He was major of the Tenth Regiment of Tennessee. Their children were: (7) Elizabeth (Bettie) Jane, Harriet Rebecca, Daniel Meek, Nancy Josephine, Cynthia Alice, Margaret Evaline, Anna Gaines, and John William.

(7) Elizabeth (Bettie) Jane McMillan (June 20, 1839-Aug. 10, 1886), eldest daughter of Gaines and Mary Ann (Goddard) McMillan, married, September 21, 1859, John M. Meek. They lived in Jefferson County on a farm that had been owned by Daniel Meek.⁵⁸ They gave it the name, "Fancy Meadows." The members of this family belonged to the Shunem, or Strawberry Plains Presbyterian Church. John Meek's grandfather, Adam Meek, a Revolutionary soldier, and his wife, Martha (Wallace) Meek, are buried in the cemetery at Strawberry Plains. John M. and Bettie (McMillan) Meek had ten children (8) Horace M. Meek (1860-1872) died at an early age. (8) Alexander Kennedy Meek lived in Washington, D. C., and married Miss Fannie Hayden. Their daughter, Dr. Lois Meek, lives in that city. (8) John Lamar Meek, a graduate of the University of Tennessee, was an official of the Southern Railway, lived in Atlanta, Chattanooga, and Knoxville; married Mary Miller Fleming.⁵⁹ Their son, John Fleming Meek,

(6) Cynthia Jane Goddard (June 27, 1826-Aug. 11, 1900) was born at what is now Riverdale, Knox County; died in Knoxville. At the age of ten years she had lost, by death, both parents. Then she lived for some years at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Harriet Campbell Blackburn, in Jefferson County. When her sister, Mary Ann, married Gaines McMillan in 1838, she lived with them until January, 1845, at which time she was married by the Rev. Gideon Stebbins White, to James McMillan (June 9, 1824-Aug. 18, 1898), brother of Gaines. They rode five miles to attend the Strawberry Plains Presbyterian Church until the Caledonia Presbyterian Church was organized in their community in 1858. They were charter members and James was clerk of the session for many years; was a ruling elder until 1898 when his family moved to Knoxville.⁴³ They were buried in Woodlawn Cemetery. Their children were: (7) Mary Jane Lockhart, Nancy I., Harriet Elizabeth, John Goddard, Alice Ademla, Fanny F., James L. D., William M., Cynthia A., Sarah R., and Lucy Adele.

(7) Mary Jane Lockhart McMillan (Sept. 1845-Sept. 10, 1908), daughter of James and Cynthia Jane (Goddard) McMillan, was married, August 27, 1865, by the Rev. William H. Lyle, to James Madison Luttrell (Feb. 4, 1840-Mar. 31, 1905), son of James and Dicey Ann (Murphy) Luttrell. They lived in Knox County until they had three children, then removed to Strawberry Plains, Jefferson County, Tennessee. Their farm was nearly a mile from the village. Where it was not cultivated wild strawberries grew. When a Presbyterian church, U. S. was organized at that place. James M. and Mary Luttrell were charter members; the former was an elder in the church until the family moved to Knoxville. A memorial window, placed by the descendants of this couple, is in the new church edifice recently erected. James was one of three school commissioners of

to bring up an orphaned niece and aided several young men who were studying for the ministry. They paid the college expenses of Thomas Jefferson Lamar, a Jefferson County young man, who received a degree from Maryville College and, also, a degree from Union Theological Seminary.⁴⁸

Their niece, Mary Ann Goddard, lived with them several years until she was married to Gaines McMillan. Daniel Meek willed a farm to her first child, Betsy J. McMillan; left a legacy to Maryville College, and provided funds for settling his slaves in Liberia if they were willing to go.⁴⁹ He was an elder in the Shunem Presbyterian Church and wrote a brief history of the church. After the church building was destroyed during the Civil War, services were conducted in Mrs. Betsy Meek's mansion among spreading oak trees. There is a cemetery near the site of the home in which a number of the Meeks are interred.

JAMES CAMPBELL

(5) James Campbell (June 6, 1796-May 25, 1879), soldier, farmer, miller, was the son of Captain Alexander and Mary (Lockhart) Campbell. He was born in Knox County, just five days after the state of Tennessee was admitted into the Union. He lived upon part of the plantation settled by his father on the north side of the beautiful French Broad River, where today, there is a label reading "RIVERDALE COMMUNITY." It is on the Thorngrove Road. As a young soldier he served his country in the War of 1812 in the Thirty-ninth Regiment, United States Volunteers, of which John Williams was the colonel. Sam Houston was an ensign in that regiment, which took part in the Battle of Tohopeka (the Horseshoe) in 1814. In the battle Houston was wounded and James Campbell, being near, helped carry him from the field.⁵⁰ Years afterward, in recognition of his service to her husband, Mrs. Houston presented Houston's gold-headed cane to this hero.⁵¹

As a farmer, James Campbell experimented with the best grasses, grains, fruits, and livestock. He raised grapes and had some success with the tea plant.⁵² During the Civil War, though he was too old to take any active part in the struggle, he was an adherent of states rights. Some loyal neighbors were in opposition to his views and annoyed him with threats to burn his house and other buildings. They did destroy his mill and caused him to go to Texas for awhile. When he returned to the state he remained for a time at Sweetwater, where he had friends and relatives, until he was "permitted to return to his home."⁵³

He married, first, October 9, 1822, Patsey (or Penelope) Hazelwood, whose parents lived in the neighborhood. His second marriage, August 11,

1825, was to Charlotte Dardis (1800-Apr. 23, 1870), of Knoxville, daughter of James and Lucy (Sims) Dardis.⁵⁴

By his first marriage, he had a son, (6) William Alexander; by his second wife, the children were: (6) Lucy Ann, Mary Elizabeth, Andrew Jackson, Thomas Rodgers Caldwell, Catherine Harriet, James Dardis (1838-1852), Charlotte Josephine, and Margaret Jane.

(6) William Alexander Campbell (1823-May 10, 1908), son of James and Patsey (Hazelwood) Campbell, participated in the Mexican War, 1846-1847. He was a volunteer in the Knoxville Dragoons, organized June 10, 1846, with William R. Caswell, captain, and Samuel Bell, lieutenant, and which became a part of the Second Regiment. The men in this regiment were mustered out at New Orleans sometime after April, 1847. This soldier did not return to Tennessee at that time but remained in the Southwest until he joined a group of men bound for the gold fields of California, in 1849 or 1850. However, gold digging did not yield the wealth anticipated, but as prices of all farm and garden products were enormously high and they were in great demand, this soldier turned his attention to farming and, in this, succeeded. A small Mexican War pension was useful to him. After fifty-six years away from his native land, he sold his possessions in California and came to visit his relatives and remained with them until his death. His remains lie in the National Cemetery in Knoxville.⁵⁵

(6) Lucy Ann Campbell (June, 1826-Oct. 30, 1911), daughter of James and Charlotte (Dardis) Campbell, married, July 20, 1856, F. Augustus Schnicke, a landscape artist and gardner. Their home at Riverdale, situated upon a hill overlooking the French Broad River, was ornamented with evergreens and many flowering shrubs that bordered the driveway leading from the highway to the house. Their children were: (7) Lucy (b. 1857), Fred, Herbert, Theresa, Rose, Thelma, Luther (who lived in Florida), and Thomas Schnicke (who married Annie Kleipstein).

(6) Mary Elizabeth Campbell (Aug. 22, 1828-Dec. 15, 1897), daughter of James and Charlotte (Dardis) Campbell, married, July 21, 1859, John Alexander McMillan Thornton (Mar. 22, 1826-Mar. 29, 1909), son of Thomas Davis and Elizabeth (McMillan) Thornton. J. A. M. Thornton was a grocery merchant in the Knoxville Market House. Their three sons were: Thomas Campbell, James W., and John Andrew.

(7) Thomas Campbell Thornton (Sept. 6, 1860-Mar. 3, 1942) was a retail shoe merchant in Knoxville for more than fifty years; was a member of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church since early childhood. He married, December 18, 1895, Annie Jett (b. Jan. 7, 1873 in Chattanooga). Their two children are: (8) John Edward Thornton, a graduate of the University of Tennessee, a member of the Sons of the Revolution, and an insurance agent; and (8) Mary Elizabeth Thornton, who was a teacher in the Knoxville schools, married Hugh M. Davis, an official of C. M. McClung and Company.

(7) James W. Thornton (Apr. 19, 1862-Dec. 6, 1936) was a jeweler on Market Square in Knoxville; later carried on the same business in Decatur, Alabama. He married Isabella Frow (d. Oct. 6, 1938). They both died in Alabama, but were interred in New Gray Cemetery, Knoxville.

(7) John Andrew Thornton was born, May 22, 1867, in Knoxville; died in Philadelphia. He was a boiler manufacturer with business in Pittsburgh. He married, first, Mary Badge, and had a daughter (8) Kate; married, second, Edith Badge, and had a daughter, (8) Frances.

(6) Andrew Jackson Campbell, M.D. (Oct. 16, 1830-May 4, 1904), son of James and Charlotte (Dardis) Campbell, was graduated from the Medical College in Philadelphia in the class of 1855-56 and practiced medicine and surgery in Knoxville, Tennessee. During the Civil War he served as a surgeon in the Confederate army in the Fourth Infantry of which W. M. Churchwell was the colonel. Upon returning from the war, he resided on Walnut Street, then on Asylum (now Western Avenue) Street.⁶⁰ He married, Feb. 26, 1857, Mary J. Lynch (1837-Jan. 26, 1923), daughter of Captain James Lynch, of Abingdon, Virginia, who was a volunteer in the War with Mexico and was killed in that war. She was educated at the East Tennessee Female Institute in Knoxville. The Campbell family belonged to the Fifth Avenue (old Third) Presbyterian Church, Mrs. Campbell being a member fifty years. One of their neighbors was the Hodgson family of which the celebrated author, Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, was a member. Dr. and Mrs. Campbell were interred in Gray Cemetery, Knoxville. Their children were: (7) James Eugene, Walter Lynch, Thomas Andrew (d. young), Anna (d. young), Ada Mary, Rose Rodgers, Maude Jackson, Ernest Lee, Luther Shepherd, Bertha Newman and Raymond Mortimer.

(7) James Eugene Campbell (1858-June 18, 1934) attended the University of Tennessee; was a business man. He married Ellen Riley and removed to Orlando, Florida, but returned to Knoxville before his death. Their son, (8) Albert Campbell, after finishing at the Knoxville High School, engaged in the marble business. He resides in Louisville, Kentucky.

(7) Walter Lynch Campbell married; lived in Alabama; then in Chicago; is with Rand, McNally and Company.

(7) Ada Mary Campbell (b. 1866) was educated in private schools of Knoxville and is a well-known historical writer and poetess, and contributor to periodicals and newspapers. She is the author of the play, "The Scarlet Coat," which was produced by TVA players in 1936. She is a member of a number of societies in which she has held offices. Among them are the Woman's Club, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and the Tennessee Woman's Press and Authors' Club. She is also a member of the Clan Campbell Association of America of which she is justifiably proud. In October, 1898, she was married to Charles Linville Larew (d. May 3, 1945), owner and operator of the Larew Printing Company for more than fifty years.

(7) Rose Rodgers Campbell (b. Mar. 28, 1868) married Edward Herbert Lennon (Sept. 9, 1863-May 26, 1927), who was born in Buffalo, New York. He was a vestryman of St. James Episcopal Church in Knoxville, Tennessee, and was a prominent Mason. The family lived on Scott Street at the time of his death. Mrs. Lennon lives now at Winston-Salem, North Carolina. Their children: (8) Mary Lynch Lennon, who married Ben

(7) Maude Jackson Campbell married Clarence King; lives in Fountain City. Their children: (8) James Larew, Terry Tracy, and Luther.

(7) Ernest Lee Campbell (b. July 19, 1872) was, for many years, a traveling salesman associated with the Woodruff Hardware Company and, later, with the Tampa (Florida) Hardware Company. He lives in Knoxville; married Edna Gleason. He is a member of the Presbyterian church; is also a Mason.

(7) Luther Shepherd Campbell (Dec. 10, 1876-Jan. 17, 1945) was a lieutenant in the Spanish American War. He lived at Harrogate, Tennessee; married there, January 11, 1917, Rosetta Eastridge. He was buried in the National Cemetery in Knoxville with Veterans of the Spanish-American War conducting the service.

(7) Bertha Newman Campbell and her brother, Luther, were twins, December 10, 1876. She married, first, James Collier; second, Maurice Davidson; lives in California.

(7) Raymond M. Campbell for a number of years was connected with Payne's Shoe Store. In World War I he was overseas, was gassed, and spent a long time in an army hospital. He is an artist; lives in California.

(6) Thomas Rodgers Caldwell Campbell (Aug. 18, 1833-Sept. 4, 1913), son of James and Charlotte (Dardis) Campbell, was born and died at Riverdale, Knox County, Tennessee. He was graduated from Maryville College. On November 28, 1865, he married Anna Elizabeth Davis (Jan. 1, 1844-Jan. 20, 1909), daughter of Rebs Jones Davis and wife, Melinda Singleton, of Sevier County. Mrs. Campbell was graduated from a school at Salem, North Carolina.⁶⁷ At the reorganization of Lebanon Presbyterian Church after the close of the Civil War, Thomas Rodgers Campbell was installed a ruling elder and Mrs. Campbell was a member. He cultivated his large "Riverdale Farm" with as much interest in agriculture and stock raising as his father had had. Riverdale was a post-office until the rural delivery system was established. "No man in his section of the country devoted more of his time for the advancement of the cause of education and good roads."⁶⁸ Their children: (7) James Rebs, Thomas Brabson, Margaret Linda, John Alexander, Joseph B. (d. young), and Lucy Charlotte.

(7) James Rebs Campbell (Jan. 25, 1867-Aug. 15, 1924) received a degree at the University of Tennessee in 1887; was a charter member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. As a member of the First Presbyterian Church in Knoxville he was active in its work. In 1887 he was an auditor for the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad (now a part of the Southern Railway system). He was later receiver of the Cumberland Railroad with headquarters in Kentucky.⁶⁹ In June, 1890, he was married, by the Rev. James Park, to Lucy Evelyn Proffitt, daughter of James K. and Sarah Jane (Parker) Proffitt.

(7) Thomas Brabson Campbell (June 10, 1869-Mar. 1, 1931) was graduated from the University of Tennessee in the class of 1889. He married, June 27, 1917, Jessie Miranda Berry (Oct. 6, 1877-Dec. 11, 1937), daughter of Jesse Wells Berry and wife, Rutelia McMillan. Their daughter, (8) Margaret Ruth Campbell (b. Jan. 21, 1921), a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, married, September 12, 1942, Wallace G. Price; lives at Breckenridge, Colorado.

(7) Linda (Lynn) Campbell (Aug. 26, 1872-Oct. 20, 1943) was graduated from Knoxville High School, 1889; married, January, 1896, Dr. John Willis Drinnen (Mar. 6, 1866-Apr. 7, 1938), of Sevier County. He first practiced medicine at Henry's Cross Roads, then at Riverdale; was a member of the Baptist church; was a Mason; also, a member of the Knox County Library Board.⁶⁰ Their children: (8) Margaret E. Drinnen (b. Apr. 10, 1901), who married the Rev. Ira Cecil Frazier, a Baptist minister who was a chaplain in the army in World War II; (8) Lucy Sue Drinnen (b. Mar. 18, 1901); (8) Bryan Drinnen; (8) Thomas Brabson Drinnen, M.D. (1907-Feb. 24, 1944), a graduate of the University of Tennessee Medical College, Memphis, who was in service in World War II as a captain in the Army Medical Corps, and died in England.⁶¹ (He married Fern Brooks and had three sons); and (8) Anna L. Drinnen, who married Richard Austin Cate, sheriff of Knox County, Tennessee.

(7) John Alexander Campbell (b. Dec. 10, 1874) is the only child of T. R. C. Campbell living and has furnished much of the data used in this family sketch of the Campbells. He attended the Knoxville schools and then supervised his father's farm and store; also worked in the post office of Riverdale. He married, January 2, 1900, Olive Anna Kennedy (b. May 25, 1880), daughter of James and Harriet Emily (Vance) Kennedy. In 1920 they removed to Hope Hull, Alabama, near Montgomery. They have three daughters: (8) Irene Campbell, a graduate of the University of Alabama, 1925, who married Richard W. Powell and has three children; (8) Anna Harriet Campbell, who was graduated from the University of Alabama, 1929, and married Horace Clifton Horn, and has two children; and (8) Johnnielyn Campbell, a graduate of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Alabama, 1940, who married Thomas B. Sutton, and has two children.

(7) Lucy Charlotte Campbell (Nov. 22, 1883-Sept. 24, 1928) married June, 1906, Henry Frazier Bailey; lived at Orlando, Florida. Their children: (8) James Campbell Bailey, who married Betty Carrington; (8) Margaret Bailey; (8) H. F. Bailey, Jr.; and (8) Saralyn, who married E. L. Brantley.

(6) Catherine (Kate) Harriet Campbell (May 23, 1836-Dec. 6, 1920), daughter of James and Charlotte (Dardis) Campbell, was born at Riverdale; died in Fountain City, Tennessee; lived much of her life in a home on the site of the new Knoxville Post Office building. As a young woman she was noted, among a large circle of relatives and friends, for her beauty and her graciousness which she retained to a wonderful degree as long as she lived. She attended both public and private schools of Knoxville. On September 16, 1858, she was married by the Rev. James Wilson to William Francis Luttrell (Aug. 8, 1827-Dec. 13, 1908), son of James and Ellen (Bounds) Luttrell, who was a farmer and, later, a grocer of Knoxville. Mrs. Luttrell was a member of Lebanon Presbyterian Church and two of her daughters were baptized in that church. In Knoxville they became members of the Third Presbyterian Church. Their three daughters were: (7) Ella J., Margaret C., and Frances.

(7) Ella Josephine Luttrell (July 23, 1859-Sept. 20, 1908), daughter of William Francis and Kate (Campbell) Luttrell, was educated in the schools of Knoxville and taught school at Strawberry Plains and in Knoxville. On November 14, 1882, she was married in the Third Presbyterian Church by the Rev. William S. Harrison, pastor, to Joseph Alexander Porter (Nov. 14, 1846-June 4, 1925), son of Boyd Porter and wife, Margaret Rhodes McNutt. Boyd Porter, a Confederate soldier, was captured and died in a Federal prison in Nashville. J. A. Porter was connected with Cowan, McClung and Company, wholesale merchants. He became an elder in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. Their children: (8) Harriet Porter, deceased, married Nathaniel N. Boyden; (8) Margaret Ellen Porter married Edwin Hendrick Gillespie; lives in Atlanta; (8) Loulie Porter (d. 1953) married William Franklin Buchanan, of Atlanta; (8) Joseph A. Porter, Jr., was with the A. E. F. in France during World War I (d. 1952); (8) Elizabeth Miriam Porter lives in Atlanta.

(7) Margaret Campbell Luttrell (Apr. 30, 1863-Nov. 17, 1944) was trained to become a teacher and taught in the schools of Knoxville and of Strawberry Plains. She was married in the Third Presbyterian Church, Dec. 21, 1882, to Paul Stuart McMullen (Nov. 25, 1856-Feb. 12, 1933) son of the Rev. James P. McMullen and wife, Nora Fulton. The Reverend McMullen was a chaplain in the Confederate army; lost his life on the battle field at Resaca, Georgia. P. Stuart McMullen was a salesman for a furniture company and, later, was in the marble business. They had three children. (8) Pauline McMullen married Lawrence Paul Scantlin; has two sons. (8) Jamie McMullen was an outstanding business woman; died in 1952. (8) Margaret McMullen was a teacher in Knoxville City Schools and married Hugh Howard McCutchan, who served in World War I. Their only child, H. H. McCutchan, Jr., a pilot in the Eighth Army Air Force, World War II, was killed in action.⁶²

(7) Frances Luttrell (d. Mar. 3, 1937) was born in Knoxville; died at San Diego, California. She had a business education; was secretary of a Knoxville law firm several years; was then employed in the office of the Southern Railway in Washington, D. C. She married Joseph Canby Hadsall, of West Virginia. They removed to Wheatland, Wyoming, where her husband died in 1911. She resided after his death at Del Mar, California, at which place her only son, Joseph Vernon Hadsall, was killed in a car wreck at the age of twenty years.

(6) Charlotte Josephine Campbell, daughter of Jane and Charlotte (Dardis) Campbell, was not married. She lived with the family of Dr. J. W. Drinnen and died February 27, 1921.

(6) Margaret Jane Campbell (Aug. 4, 1844-Oct. 2, 1874), daughter of James and Charlotte (Dardis) Campbell, married Eugene Easton while her father's family was living in Texas, and they lived at Paris, Texas. They had three children: (7) Annie Easton, who married Mr. Kelley, a druggist of Dallas, and had a daughter, Olive Kelley; (7) James Easton; and (7) John Easton who lived in Indian Territory.

ANN CAMPBELL GODDARD

(5) Ann Campbell (1799-Oct. 28, 1856), daughter of Captain Alexander and Mary (Lockhart) Campbell, was married, January 25, 1820, to John Goddard (d. July 11, 1826), a brother of William Goddard who married her sister, Jane. John Goddard was a farmer, "a very meritorious man and a highly useful citizen."⁶³ He died while on business at Tuscumbia, Alabama. William Campbell, brother-in-law, was the administrator of the estate which was settled in December, 1927. In an obituary of Mrs. Ann Goddard, written by Dr. J. G. M. Ramsey, her family physician, she is highly praised for the care and training she gave to her three children, the youngest of whom was born after her husband's death. The children: (6) William Lafayette, Elizabeth Jane, and Mary Avis Lockhart.

(6) William Lafayette Goddard (Sept. 27, 1822-Aug. 14, 1894), son of John and Ann (Campbell) Goddard, married January 6, 1846, Lucy Ann Armstrong (Dec. 21, 1829-Jan. 18, 1893), daughter of Moses and Amelia (Morrow) Armstrong. They had two children: (7) John Moses and Charles Bruce.

(7) John Moses Goddard (1846-Apr. 27, 1928) married Frances Landers (d. 1906), of Rome, Georgia. He was for some time in the lumber business in Knoxville. He was interred in Greenwood Cemetery, Knoxville. Their children: (8) W. A. Goddard, who married Lelia Hammer; (8) John M. Goddard, who died in Oklahoma; (8) Charles R. Goddard, who died in 1936; (8) Fannie Lee; (8) Henrietta Goddard, who married Frank Stewart; (8) Mary Lucy, who married a Mr. Brown; (8) Lillian S. Goddard, a social worker in Knoxville, as is (8) Lessie L. Goddard; and (8) Roxie K. Goddard, who married the Rev. Vondas L. Flenniken and lives in Fountain City.

(7) Charles Bruce Goddard was graduated from the Law College of the University of Tennessee.

(6) Elizabeth (Betsy) Jane Goddard, daughter of John and Ann (Campbell) Goddard, married, February 9, 1850, Claibourn Nance and they had four daughters: (7) Elizabeth Nance, who married a Mr. Vineyard; (7) Mary Nance, who married a Mr. Burnett; (7) Josephine Nance, who married Robert Stone; and (7) Sallie Nance. It is a tradition that all of them removed to Missouri.

(6) Mary Avis Lockhart Goddard was born, January 14, 1827, six months after her father's death. She married, October 1, 1845, James Wiley Bowman (b. July, 1823, d. about 1884), son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Green) Bowman who had settled on Tuckahoe Creek but removed to the south side of the French Broad opposite the Campbell plantation. Wiley Bowman, as he was known, had a thousand acres of land and specialized in breeding fine cattle. The land contained fine marble. He was a justice of the peace and had served as a deputy sheriff; was fond of hunting and kept a pack of hounds.⁶⁴ Deer and other game were abundant at that time in the

(7) Albert Bowman married Mrs. Nannie (Keener) Kennedy, widow of John Kennedy; lived at Henry's Cross Roads, Sevier County.

CYNTHIA H. CAMPBELL

(5) Cynthia H. Campbell (1800-Oct. 20, 1875), daughter of Captain Alexander and Mary (Lockhart) Campbell, married, June 11, 1823, Colonel Thomas Rodgers (d. Dec. 22, 1870), a widower with three children. She was a member of Lebanon Presbyterian Church but transferred to the Second Presbyterian Church in Knoxville, after marriage. At the time of her death, Dr. James Rodgers, of Knoxville, was her only step-child living.⁶⁶

JOHN CAMPBELL

(5) John Campbell (1804-May, 1876), son of Captain Alexander and Mary (Lockhart) Campbell, was a farmer; owned valuable land. He was a ruling elder in the Lebanon Presbyterian Church and was a justice of the peace in his district of Knox County. However, after the Federals took possession of East Tennessee, in 1863, he removed to Georgia and, afterwards, to Alabama. He died and was buried in Cherokee County, Alabama.⁶⁷ He married, June 29, 1829, Elizabeth Armstrong (Apr. 5, 1811-d. 1865), daughter of Moses and Amelia (Morrow) Armstrong. Her father operated the well-known Armstrong Ferry on Holston River four miles above Knoxville—later known as Ruggles Ferry—which ceased to function after the Holston bridge was constructed there. Mrs. Campbell died at Birmingham, Alabama. Their children were (6) Richard, Amelia, Mary Jane, Moses A. (1838-1850), Margaret, and William Lafayette (b. 1842).

(6) Richard (Dick) Campbell (b. 1830) married Eliza Armstrong, daughter of James M. and Pricey (Monday) Armstrong.

(6) Amelia Campbell (b. 1832) married, first, Elbert Sevier Davis, who had taken part in the Mexican War. They had a son, (7) E. S. Davis, Jr., who was a physician of San Antonio, Texas. Mrs. Davis married, second, Isaac Alexander, and had three children: (7) John, Charles, and Elizabeth, who lived in Rome, Georgia.

(6) Mary Jane Campbell (b. 1835) married Marshall Alexander Huffaker (Feb. 25, 1830-Dec. 13, 1897), son of Henry Huffaker. They had two sons and five daughters: (7) William L., Henry Floyd, Alice, Josie, Annie Armetta, Bertha E., and Florence Adeline.

(7) William L. Huffaker (May 6, 1862-Sept. 7, 1918) was a farmer; lived at Hunters, Washington (State). He was married and had two children. He was accidentally shot and died at Hunters.

(7) Henry Floyd Huffaker (June 3, 1870-Feb. 7, 1946) was born in McMinn County, Tennessee; died in Knoxville. For more than forty years he was a prominent dentist of Knoxville.⁶⁸ He married, first, Frances Patterson and they had a daughter, (8) Emma Mary (Maizie), an attractive and popular young lady who was killed, December, 1925, in an automobile accident while returning from a social function at the Cherokee Country Club, Knoxville. After the death of his first wife, Dr. Huffaker married, November 16, 1935, Mrs. Ruth Yocman, of Atlanta.

(7) Alice Huffaker (b. Nov. 29, 1867) married J. C. Bettis; lived at Hillsboro, Oregon. (7) Josie Huffaker (b. July 3, 1860) married Dr. W. L. Cate, of Jefferson City, Tennessee. (7) Annie Armetta Huffaker (b. Dec. 27, 1864) married Dr. W. K. King, of Jefferson City. (7) Bertha E. Huffaker (b. Jan. 1868) married W. T. McCarty. (7) Florence Adaline Huffaker (b. Nov. 1, 1879) married Carroll Foust.

(6) Margaret Campbell (Dec. 25, 1839-Jan. 24, 1909) became the second wife of Joseph Keener. She was buried in the Salem Cemetery at Riverdale.

HARRIET CAMPBELL BLACKBURN PECK

(5) Harriet Campbell (Mar. 12, 1806-July 27, 1877), the youngest child of Captain Alexander and Mary (Lockhart) Campbell, was born in Knox County; died at New Market, Tennessee. She married, first, Alexander Blackburn, who had one son. He died in 1846. Harriet married, second, September 5, 1850, Henry H. Peck, a widower whose first wife was Elizabeth Cox. He and his two wives were buried in the Mossy Creek Cemetery (now the Jefferson City Cemetery).⁶⁹

(This Campbell sketch will be concluded in the next number of the Publications. A history of the families of "Elder" David Campbell and Sergeant James Campbell will be given; also some notes relative to the Lockhart Family.)
